

CONTENTS

1 The Hong Kong Special Administrative Region: An Unfinished Transition

China's Basic Policies Regarding Hong Kong	4
The Principle of "One Country, Two Systems"	8
Origin of the Principle	8
Four Aspects of the Principle	9
The Concept of Autonomy and the Principle of "One Country, Two Systems"	14
Nature of the Study	16
Areas of Concern to be Examined	16
Previewing the Proposals	18
Research Approach	25
Organization of the Dissertation	27

2 An Open and Responsible Government: The Seedbed of "One Country, Two Systems"

Hong Kong	28
Hong Kong Before the 1980s	29
Hong Kong From the 1980s Onwards	31
Two Recent Studies on Hong Kong	32
System of Government	34
Hong Kong's System of Government Before 1 July 1997	37
Hong Kong's System of Government After 1 July 1997	41
Open and Responsible Government	43
Responsible Government	43
Openness and Responsible Government	49
Government Efficiency versus Open and Responsible Government	50
Governmental Autonomy	52

Political Culture	56
Conclusion	60
3 Hong Kong As A British Colony: From the 1980s to the Mid-1990s
Significant Early Developments	61
District Administration Reform, 1980-82	62
Sino-British Negotiations on Hong Kong's Future, 1982-1984	64
Debates Over Governing Arrangements	68
The Government's 1984 Review of Developments in Representative Government	68
The Drafting of the Basic Law (1985-1988)	71
The Government's 1987 Review of Developments in Representative Government	75
The Crisis of Confidence	77
The Tiananmen Square Incident and its Impacts on Hong Kong	78
The Confidence Crisis and Measures taken to Stop It	82
The Further Politicization of Hong Kong Society	86
Chris Patten and his Political Reforms	88
China's "Second Stove" for the HKSAR	94
Conclusion	96
4 The Hong Kong Special Administrative Region: A New Era But the Same Old Problems
A Mixed Bag of Legacies	99
Colonial Legacies that Lay the Foundation for Hong Kong's New Political Context	99
Colonial Legacies that Help to Create Hong Kong's Current Problems	105

Governance Problems of the HKSAR	111
Imbalance in the Powers of the Executive and the Legislature	112
Problems of Bureaucratic Accountability and Responsiveness of the Civil Service	112
Holding the Government Accountable to the Public	114
Continuing Overrepresentation of Business and Professional Interests in the Governance Process	115
Hong Kong's Political Parties and Their Orientations	117
Political Orientations of Hong Kong's Liberal Political Parties	118
Political Orientations of Hong Kong's Conservative Political Parties	121
Political Issues being Debated in Today's HKSAR	125
The Debate on Democratization Continues	126
The Gradual Erosion of Civil Liberties	128
What Were Missed in the Debates?	129
Powers of the Legislative Council and the Executive-Legislative Relationship	129
Bureaucratic Accountability, Responsiveness, and the Ministerial System	131
Openness of the HKSAR Government	131
Conclusion	133
5 Implementing the Principle of "One Country, Two Systems": Some Suggestions
Electing the Chief Executive by Universal Suffrage	135
An Overview of Direct and Indirect Elections of the Chief Executive	136
Electing the Chief Executive in Hong Kong	140
The Concern of a Runaway Executive	143
An Electoral System for Hong Kong's Chief Executive Election	143
Feasibility of this Proposal	144
Creating a System of Ministerial Responsibility	148

The Lack of a Unified Government	149
Poor Coordination and Non-accountability of the Senior Civil Servants	152
An Outdated Understanding of Bureaucratic Responsiveness	155
A System of Ministerial Responsibility for the HKSAR	157
Feasibility of this Proposal	160
Securing an Open System of Government	165
Access to Public Information in Hong Kong--Time for a Better Way	165
Feasibility of this Proposal	169
Strengthening the Operation of the Legislative Council	171
The Idea of “Executive-led” Government and Hong Kong’s Executive-Legislative Relations	172
Necessary Amendments to the Basic Law	175
The Legislative Council’s Committee System	179
Staff Support to the Legislative Council	182
Feasibility of this Proposal	183
6 Making the Principle of “One Country, Two Systems” Work: Some Speculations
The Implementation of the Principle of “One Country, Two Systems	188
Is Hong Kong Culturally Ready for an Open and Responsible Governmental System?	194
Political Participation, Political Apathy, and Hong Kong’s Political Culture	194
The 1998 Legislative Council Election--A New Chapter in Hong Kong’s Political Culture	197
Looking Ahead to the Future	199
Conclusion	200
Bibliography	202