This research is the result of my two-year study at Virginia Tech, however, without the people mentioned here it would never have taken place. My gratefulness to them is beyond words.

Professor Bob Dyck gives me enormous trust, help, and support as my advisor and a very precious friend. Because of him, my study experience turned out to be an unforgettable process of rediscovering myself. His continuous hard work with me on my paper made me the luckiest graduate student of all time. Franciska Dyck helps me tremendously in my life outside of academia with not only great food but also intelligent advice. Thank you for having the faith in me.

Professor John Browder and Alnoor Ebrahim as my committee members offered their invaluable suggestions in urban planning and international development enriched the research. John Randolph, a great Dean, added only more pleasure to my stay at VT.

I'd also like to thank numerous peers and friends at Virginia Tech, including Krystal Wright, Jodi Vandervort, Ramya Ramanath, Liz Bloomer, Raymond De Leon, Ben Garrett, Will and Rachel Christenson, John Housein, my tolerant roommate Mercedes Garcia, and my old dorm pals at Main Campbell Hall.

My deep appreciations go to my interviewees in Guangzhou, China, who contributed to my research.

I dedicate this achievement to my family and friends in China, especially to my beloved parents, Huang Zhimin and Liu Qiqing, and my twin sister, Huang Tao. They have nurtured me with their unconditional love, care, and steady support so I am able to pursue a better future.

I am very grateful for my most special friend and mate, who gives me continuous love, affection, caring, patience, royalty, joy, spiritual harmony, as well as many brilliant ideas in both life and research – Jerry R. Smith, my dearest love. Thank you for picking me up when I fall, cheering with me when I succeed. I am very blessed to have you in my life.

Last but not the least, thank you my almighty GOD, my Lord and only Savior.

THANK YOU!!!
