Lieder’s 34
Paces Tech

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Senior forward Craig Lieder tossed in 34 points as Virginia Tech smashed tiny Southwestern University of Georgetown, Tex., 102-66 in the consolation semifinals of the All-College basketball tournament Saturday afternoon.

Oklahoma City and Weber State were playing in the consolation final Saturday afternoon.

Saturday night, Houston and Rutgers were to battle for third and fourth place, and Southern California and Oral Roberts were to meet for the championship.

Tech, last year’s National Invitational Tournament champion and seeded No. 1 for the All-College, promptly lost to Houston and Weber State, but was not about to be embarrassed by Southwestern.

The Gobblers exploded to a 49-26 halftime lead against the cold-shooting Texas club. Southwestern hit only 25 per cent of its field goals in the first half.

Steve Allgoewer, a 5-foot-9 senior guard, pumped in 24 points for the Pirates, who were a replacement for Southwestern Louisiana which is on probation.
