BLACKSBURG — Don Lloyd Fleeger and Bill Moss, both familiar to the Virginia Tech football scene, will broadcast the Gobbler football games this fall.

Athletic Director Frank Moseley made the announcement Saturday.

Fleeger, who uses the professional air name of Don Lloyd, did color commentary for Virginia Tech last year. He will take over the play by play, replacing Marty Brennaman, who will broadcast the Cincinnati Reds baseball games this season.

Moss has done the play by play of the Virginia Tech games the last three years over the educational channels within the state. He will do the radio color this year.

"We've been impressed with the way each of these men has handled himself in connection with Tech football in the past, and we believe they will give us a very strong team for our broadcasts this season," Moseley said.

Fleeger, a native of Ohio and a veteran of 20 years in radio, has done play by play for William & Mary. He has worked in Virginia since 1967. Moss, a native of Richmond who has been in radio and TV for 11 years, did color for Richmond in 1967.
