Tech Plans More Sports

Sports Writer

If Virginia Tech Athletic Director Frank Moseley has his way, female Hokie athletes will have two more varsity sports this fall.

“I’m hoping we can add two more sports this fall,” he said. "I don’t want to venture what they’ll be . . . because we want to study justly what we should do."

Tech currently fields intercollegiate women’s teams in basketball, swimming and tennis.

“Now we’ve been surveying around the state and adjoining states for what is prevalent and what the women desire,” Moseley said. "We find likes and dislikes."

A major criterion in deciding which two women’s club sports will be upgraded rests upon financial consideration.

“A lot of times it comes down to the most you can get out of the dollar,” the athletic director said. "It’s what you can afford."