Sorority memorializes sister

"Sara taught me never to give up," Weiner said. "She was a teacher herself." Weiner related Wojciechowski’s life direction to her passion for architecture.

"It was all coming together for her like a good building," Weiner said.

As part of AXO, Wojciechowski had many friends. One of Wojciechowski’s best friends, Megan Kortzstedt, told the story of her friendship and the memories they had shared.

"In terms of her freshman year, she became more than a friend, she became a sister," Kortzstedt said.

Weiner’s little sister at AXO, Sarah Smith, also shared memories about Wojciechowski and gave a short speech about her sister.

"We will forever miss her smile," Smith said.

Defence anchors Tech for 51-7 over Syracuse

by Jamie Renn
Sports Assistant

The old saying “offense wins games, defense wins championships” has been uttered over and over throughout the history of毡赛ban白松. If this is true, then the Virginia Tech football team certainly looked like a champi- onship contender Saturday in game against Syracuse.

The Hokie defense held the Orangemen to 172 total net yards in route to a 51-7 hammering. Economically, the Hokie defense was consistency. They were working well together, and defensive players right now,” said head coach Frank Wien- er. "They’re playing well together, and we’re doing what we did last year and not play very well and to come back later and play the way they did today was a lot of good things about our staff and our players."

Those 604 yards were on the minds of everyone associated with Tech’s defense going into the contest, and they were deter- mined to overcome the poor performance.

"Anytime somebody puts up 604 yards on you, you take that personally," said inside linebacker Vegas Robinson. "I think that’s what we really made them work today."

The one that developed a friendship with Wojciechowski was Sara Wojciechowski, who died May 3 in a car crash.

As part of AXO, Wojciechowski was also skilled in a car crash shortly after launching her fourth year in the architecture program.

"We’re proud of our defensive staff and defensive players right now,” said head coach Frank Beamer. "We have a lot of good players, and we’re playing well together and really doing a good job of appraising the blocking schemes and being in the right place. I’m just really proud of their effort.”

Former student indicted for law school shooting

GREENSBORO— Colorado State University’s law dean Monday indicted former law student Peter Odighizuwa on capital murder charges for allegedly killing his dean, a professor and another student in a shooting rampage last year.

Odighizuwa, 45, who was deemed mentally competent to stand trial in September despite being diagnosed as a paranoid schizophrenic, will face three counts of capital murder, three counts of attempted capital murder, and six weapons charges in Broomfield County Circuit Court.

Suicide note has been set yet, according to the clock’s officer. If convicted, prosecutor Sheila Murphy has promised to seek the death penalty.

It is a large research institution, as is its home university. However, Bell said she found Tech’s differences just as appealing.

"Virginia Tech is a land-grant university," Bell said. "That makes it very different from George Washington which is a private institution.

Bell said she wanted to see how a land-grant university, like Tech, goes about trying to become one of the nation’s top 30 research institutions.

"I wanted to see what is different when a university has outreach as a part of its mission," Bell said.

Bell will also be observing how Tech implements global interaction into that goal.

"I am particularly looking at what is happening as Virginia Tech is becoming more international and becoming more conscious of the international programming they have," Bell said.

Bell said she became interested in international programming after she and her children spent two years living with an aborigine tribe in Australia.

"I saw how, in my own children, how different they were going through school after furning the experience of living in a totally different culture," Bell said. "It is just an experience that I think people should have.

Bell said she needed a campus that was technologically capable of helping with her research.

"Classroom stand out to me because it’s wired, because it’s actually got all of the technology information," Bell said.

"It’s an issue if we have a community that can sustain (advance) types of programs," Bell is a tenured professor at George Washington University and will return them after her fellows has completed.

Eight killed after bus hits tractor-trailer

TALLULAH, La. — A church bus taking senior citizens on a tour of historical sites slammed into a cotton-hauling tractor-trail er on the shoulder of a highway Monday, killing eight people and injuring seven others, state police said.

The bus driver survived the wreck and told investigators he fell asleep at the wheel before crashing into the truck, authorities said. Someone in the bus yelled, awakening him just before impact, said Trooper John Lewis.

Eleven people were on the bus when it crashed around 11 a.m. on Interstate 20, 20 miles northwest of San Antonio.

Lewis said the injured were taken to several hospitals in Mississippi and Louisiana, and at least one was injured critiically. The bus driver, Kenneth J. Thompson, was treated for minor injuries. Identities of the passengers were being withheld while family members were notified.

Carolyn May, Eldorado city secretary, said the senior citizens on the bus included retired teachers and a retired minister.

all residents must sign.

Steve Clarke, director of the College Alcohol Prevention Center, said alcohol is the number one indicator of accidents such as slips, falls and drownings.

These accidents wouldn’t have happened without alcohol, he said.

Drinking, among other things, can reduce decisions and make someone under the influence less likely to analyze situations.

"This should especially concern students who need to think more about the effects of alcohol," Clarke said.

"Most of the time bad things don’t happen but when they do, they are very serious," said Clarke. According to Clarke’s conversation with Jeff Lewis, a professor of alcohol and drug education at Virginia Tech, the Transgender Alliance was not the correct acronym for the organization in referring to the LGBTQA.

DALLAS — Two-year-old conjoined twins were successfully separated on Tuesday, October 14, 2003, at Children’s Medical Center in Dallas. The procedure, which took place in a specially made operating theatre, involved removing the boys’ heads and reconnecting their brains. The operation was successful, and the boys are now recovering in the intensive care unit.

The boys, named Ahmed and Mohamed, were joined at the head and had to be physically separated before surgery could begin. The doctors performed a marathon operation, using a specially designed table to accommodate the boys’ unique anatomy. The surgery was completed in three stages, with each stage taking approximately four hours.

The boys are now in critical but stable condition, with surgeons working to ensure their survival. There are still concerns about brain damage, but the doctors are optimistic about their chances for a full recovery.

The news of the successful separation has brought international attention to the Dallas-based World Craniofacial Foundation, which supported the operation. The foundation is dedicated to providing surgical care to children around the world who are affected by craniofacial anomalies.

The boys’ story has captured the attention of the world, highlighting the importance of medical research and the dedicated efforts of healthcare professionals. The Dallas community has come together to support the boys and their families, offering hope and encouragement for their future.

Syracuse quarterback R.J. Anderson scrambles along the sideline for a 12-yard gain, despite several Hokie tacklers chasing him down. Anderson’s longest gain of the day came on a 22-yard pass play to the Orangemen’s 37-yard line, but fell incomplete. Anderson finished the game with 65 rushing yards on 13 carries, and 120 passing yards on 12 of 23 attempts.

Virginia Tech now enters its most challenging stretch of the season. The Hokies must play at West Virginia, and then WVU hosts PIT for the Big East title (6 p.m. ET Televised). The Mountaineers are the only team in the nation with a winning record. The Mountaineers’ next game is Nov. 22 against Notre Dame.

Cubs shed image of ‘lovable losers’

by Ben Walker

Cubs’ season takes on new feel

CHICAGO — Whatever happens at Wrigley Field this week, whether his team reaches the World Series or not, Dusty Baker already has posted a huge victory for the Chicago Cubs.

He’s managed to get them to shed their longest image as baseball’s lovable losers.

Cubs could bear on their sleeves? Friendly confines? Warm and fuzzy feel?

Forget it.

Watch Mark Prior and Kerry Wood buzz a batter, even if it’s Barry Bonds, watch Kenny Lofton knock down Florida pitcher Mark Buehrman with a loose elbow. Listen to Baker shout out Tony La Russa.

More like grizzlies than baby bruins, these Cubs.

Baker wants to keep the focus on the field, though he knows a lot of time will be spent thinking about ‘the Cubs’ past.

“A lot of luck involved and I don’t know whether she’s on or out in Boston,” he said. “I guess if you want to believe that, that’s what will happen. So, I hope you all keep believing the hex is still on.”

Baker wants to keep the focus on the field, though he knows a lot of time will be spent thinking about ‘the Cubs’ past.

“Most of those guys in 1984 — Kerry Wood in 1984 with Wood set to pitch Game 2 tomorrow.”

“I don’t know. I’m not that old. I don’t have a lot of time, that long to see what goes on,” the 72-year-old Marlin manager said Monday.

“Think about the guy who was one on one with a Miami player, Lindsey Yach, at the 81st minute, midfield Emily Cagle said. "Our final pass, our attack hasn’t put them away,” said Tech head coach Greg Smith.

Tech remains strong to tie the match at 17, rallying from seven goals down. "This was a hard one to lose,” Cagle said. “We played really well. We created a lot of chances. We had a good soccer player and the build up of the game was super.”

The Hoyas racked up six goals against the Hokies with a quick 4-1 run. The Hoyas put a light on two chances on their offense. Both tied up the match at nine, however they couldn’t close out the match completely, losing 2-1.

Suspended serve Montez said her teammates. “We fought back.”

“We had a mental let down in the fourth game, losing 2-3 and taking advantage of poor passing by the Hoyas. The Hoyas remained strong to tie the match at 17, rallying from seven goals down.”

Ladies Hokies can’t weather Hurricanes

by Susan Saidarth

Staff Writer

The Miami Hurricanes were the first team to shut out the Virginia Tech women’s soccer team from all seasons, beating the Hokies 2-0 Friday night.

The Hurricanes were able to capitalize on two big plays in front of the goal for the victory.

“Our defense played super well tonight in the absence of the suspended serve Montez said her teammates. "We fought back.”

“The field bounced right back to Miami forward, Shannon Bouillion and other Tech players, not allowing Miami a 1-0 lead over the Hokies.”

For the next 23 minutes, the Hurricanes fought back to secure the one goal-deficit, but Miami had other plans. At the 81st minute, midfield Emily Cagle said. “Our final pass, our attack hasn’t put them away,” said Tech head coach Greg Smith.

Tech’s goalie, Mallory Soldner, had four saves and Miami’s goalie name, Alex Allard, had three. At the start of the second half, Miami came out ready to play. They hit the ball up and the Hokies couldn’t get past Allard, who blocked six saves.
